This course, taken in conjunction with Core Practical Philosophy I, provides a forum for further discussion of central themes in contemporary practical philosophy. It is designed to prepare students to write the comprehensive examination in practical philosophy. It covers the same topics as Core Practical Philosophy I, with additional readings, discussions, and colloquia to broaden one's grasp of the field.

Evaluation

Evaluation will be based (100%) on a written comprehensive final examination in Practical Philosophy, which may range over any of the eleven topics covered in this course. At the discretion of the course director, you may also be asked to defend your written examination orally.
